AMB 2022: GINDUMAC GmbH offers free market value appraisal for machine tools

Kaiserslautern, 07/27/2022

From 13 - 17 September 2022, the used machine experts of GINDUMAC GmbH will exhibit for the first time at AMB 2022, the leading international trade fair for metalworking, in Stuttgart.

In Hall 6, Booth D91, metal working companies can get free market value appraisals for their machinery. GINDUMAC is relying on a new evaluation concept, which includes machine condition, maintenance investments, delivery times for new machines, demand situation and production requirements in addition to the classic depreciation analysis.

"We are very much looking forward to the AMB. Being at the trade show for the first time as an exhibitor will be a very special experience for us," says GINDUMAC Managing Director Benedikt Ruf. "We want to offer metalworkers direct added value for their production planning. With our valuation approach, we provide clarity on market values and marketing options. Production managers can use our support to optimize their machine park management to sell machines at the best possible time and price with the least amount of effort."

For machining companies, it can be worthwhile to strategically include the sale of machines as a value driver in the decision-making process to reduce or increase machine capacity. As a first step, this means creating an awareness of the current value of the machines in use. With this knowledge, better decisions can be made to sell at maximum values and with best efficiency in terms of timing, capacity planning and maintenance requirements. Early pre-planning significantly increases the value potential and the ease of machinery transactions. GINDUMAC pursues the goal of creating a new awareness for the advantages of a strategic consideration of the resale of machines and actively supports the implementation.

At AMB 2022, trade show visitors can learn more about the benefits and implementation of strategic resale management in a direct exchange with the GINDUMAC team.
