

LA MÔME BIJOU - THE PEARL AS A LUCKY CHARM

When the pearl takes a sunbath

For several seasons now, the pearl has been making a big comeback. Long associated with our grandmothers' jewelry boxes and a certain idea of classicism, it is freeing itself today from its traditional codes.

At La Môme Bijou, it takes on color, and sunshine, with SUNSET PEARLS.

Parisian designer Isabelle Prat, for whom "it's always summer somewhere," revisits the traditional pearl necklace by infusing it with the colorful DNA that has run through her work for more than twenty years. Natural freshwater pearls are interspersed with small, brightly colored recycled glass beads.

The collection's statement piece, the Pearl Necklace, reprises the spirit of old hand-strung and hand-knotted necklaces. It combines 38 natural freshwater pearls of 7 to 8 mm with 36 small recycled glass beads of 3 mm. Available in nine colorways: red, pink, orange, yellow, green, turquoise, blue, purple and rainbow, it can be worn alone or slipped into a stack of necklaces.

And because La Môme Bijou loves jewelry that doesn't complicate life, the piece is easily sized thanks to its adjustable length, from 38 to 60 cm. On a swimsuit, with a white T-shirt or on a sweater in town, the pearl thus changes register. It becomes a little colorful lucky charm that you carry with you, every day.

SUNSET PEARLS doesn't stop at the necklace. The collection extends the pearl into bracelet, hoop earrings, cuff, choker... always around the dialogue between natural pearls and recycled glass beads.

With SUNSET PEARLS, this obsession with color comes to awaken one of the most classic pieces of jewelry there is.
