The Name /

A heritage, a commitment

Crafted from native gold nuggets sourced in French Guiana, the jewelry creations of Maison Honegger celebrate the union of nature's treasures and contemporary design.

Founded in 2024 by Esther Honegger, the Maison draws on the singular heritage of a family of gold prospectors committed to artisanal and traceable extraction practices.

Each piece embodies a holistic vision of luxury: a creation whose value rests as much on its material rarity as on its ethical integrity.

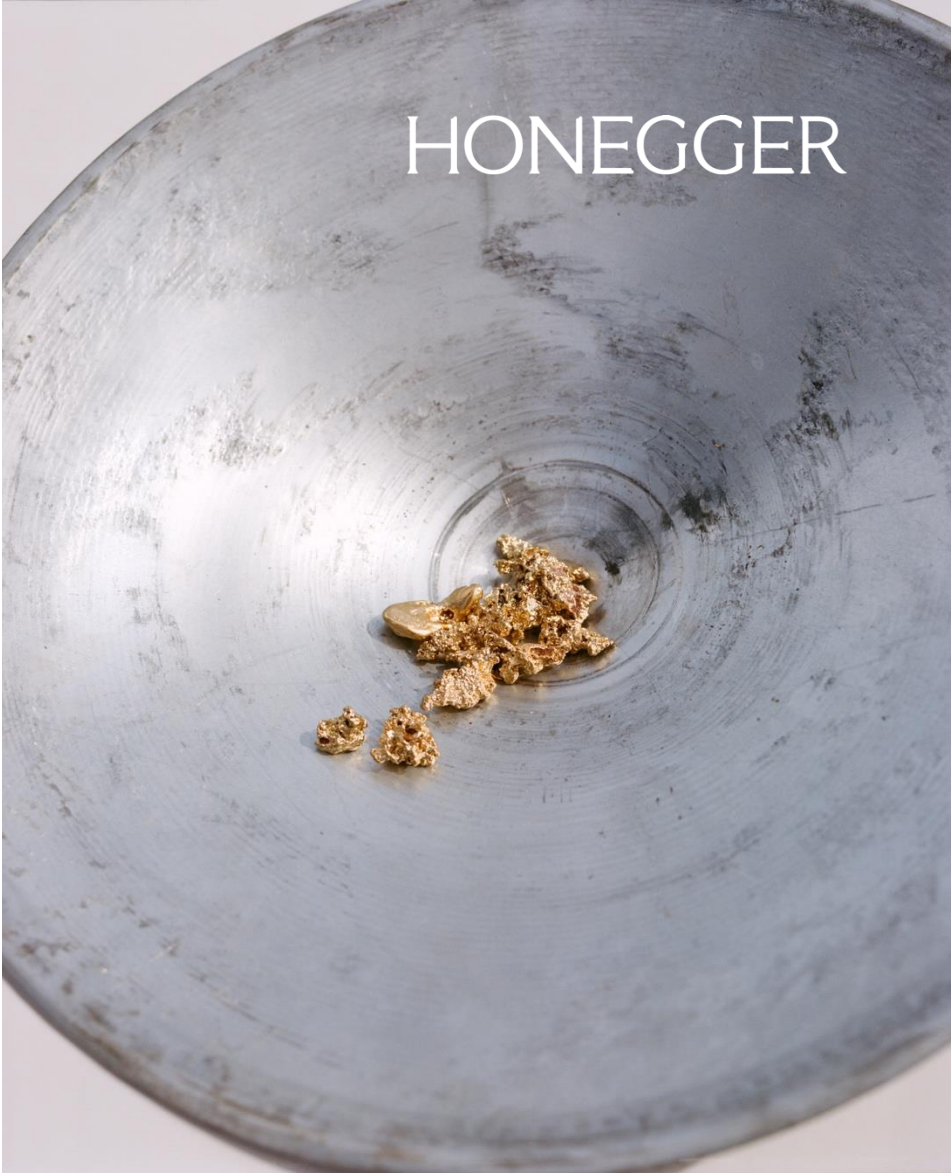

The Essence /

Native gold, the intact beauty of nature

Honegger reveals gold in its rarest and most original state: the native gold nugget.

Unlike refined or alloyed gold, its singular appeal lies in its raw, organic state, revealing the crystalline structure and natural radiance of the metal.

Shaped by geological forces, pressure and heat applied over millennia, these nuggets stand out for their unique forms, each carrying its own story.

The Family /

From a personal bond to a lifelong commitment

The story of the Honegger family in French Guiana begins in 1986 with Olivier Honegger, a forester by training and a passionate botanist.

Drawn by the region's extraordinary biodiversity, he chose to complete his military service there. Captivated by the untamed nature of the territory and the discreet presence of gold in its rivers, he decided to settle.

His path as a gold prospector began modestly, diving from a small boat into mineral-rich waters. As his activity took root, he met Tamara, a strong-willed young Brazilian woman who, like him, had left everything behind to build a new life in French Guiana.

United by a deep bond with the land, they started a family and shaped a way of life in harmony with its rhythm.

The Founder /

Passing on a legacy, pursuing a passion

Born and raised in the heart of the Amazon rainforest, Esther Honegger learned the gestures of artisanal gold extraction from childhood. After studying at EDHEC Business School, her fascination with rare materials and decorative arts led her to train with a Guyanese artisan, where she discovered the poetry of jewelry making.

In 2020, she inherited a necklace that had belonged to her grandmother, designed by her mother and made with gold nuggets extracted by her father. This precious object awakened in her a desire: to carry on this creative lineage. In 2024, she founded Honegger, and this necklace, passed down from generation to generation, became the Maison's first creation.

The Process /

Gold traceability

Each Honegger piece is designed with care and meticulously crafted in the Parisian workshop. Each gold nugget used in its creations comes directly from artisanal gold miners and carries not only the discreet rarity of native gold, but also the integrity of a human story.

Each one comes with an identity card, specifying:

- The date and place of discovery
- The name of the mining site
- The extraction method

Our partner mines in French Guiana: ERMINA, COREMA, UMSP, UMG, UMS

Commitment /

A responsible and human process

- Alluvial gold extracted without mercury or cyanide
- Complete traceability of every nugget
- Progressive reforestation of sites
- Recycling of the water used
- Solar energy at mining sites
- Direct partnerships with local communities
- Fair pay and working conditions in line with French standards

Honegger champions a vision of luxury in which creation, environment and responsibility are inseparable.

Positioning /

In a context where traceability and the origin of materials are redefining luxury, Honegger stands as a contemporary response, rooted in a unique family history.

The Campaign /

At the heart of Honegger lies the raw gold nugget, an organic treasure. As at its formation, nature plays a fundamental role in the history and daily life of the Maison, hence its omnipresence in the visual universe.

Starring Mila Van Der Host, photographed by Pegah Farahmand and styled by Linda Engelhard, the brand’s first campaign evokes the Honegger family home and explores the intimacy of the bond with landscape and nature.

The campaign is enriched with archival images from the Honegger family albums, as well as objects imbued with memory, tracing the personal story of Esther and the Maison in the form of a visual diary.
