CARROLL COUNTY HISTORY

Originally part of the Northwest Territory, most of present day Carroll County was surveyed as part of the Land Ordinance of 1785 enacted by the Continental Congress. Thomas Hutchins, Geographer of the United States, began to layout the base line or "Geographers Line" for the survey in September of 1785. Hutchins' party extended the Geographer's Line due west from the intersection of the Pennsylvania border and the Ohio River, 42 miles through what is now Carroll County. At six mile intervals along the Geographer's Line, lines were surveyed due south to the Ohio River, these lines created the first "Seven Ranges". Each range was divided into six mile square townships and each township was subdivided into one mile square sections of 640 acres. The American government hoped to use profits from the sale of land in the Seven Ranges to pay off debts from the American Revolution. This survey served as a prototype for most of the western United States and many countries of the world.

Carroll County officially came into existence on Christmas day in 1832 when it was formed by the State Legislature by taking parts from five of the surrounding counties; Columbiana, Harrison, Jefferson, Stark and Tuscarawas. At the same time Centerville was named the county seat and the name was changed to Carrollton. Carroll County was named after Charles Carroll, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Pekin was the first town founded in 1808 along the Sandy Beaver Canal. The Quaker church in Leesville was the first church and the first school founded in 1812 was in Brown Township. The Rural seminary in Harlem Springs was the first institution of higher learning, founded in 1820.

Carroll County is known for its historical sites and points of interest as well as its many lakes and camping sites.
