What the book is

A field manual, not a memoir. Leading Lazarus is the culmination of the best leadership frameworks Pastor Jared Fabac has encountered across 20 years of executive leadership in church, business, and community. Every framework in the book was pressure-tested against real teams before it made the final cut.

What it is not

Not a leadership memoir. Not another platform book. Not theory. The book contains no filler chapters and no shell frameworks. Each of the eight is meant to be applied in the reader's own context.

Foundational research

Before writing the book, Fabac commissioned the Culture Resurrection Index (CRI), a 1,000-respondent field survey of pastors, executives, and parents. The CRI is not published in the book. It was the foundational research that shaped which of Fabac's practices survived the cut.

- 82% of pastors have seriously considered leaving ministry in the last five years.
- 72% of executives have no repeatable framework for giving feedback.
- 81% of parents have never written down a family vision or shared values.
- 78% of parents report the same argument keeps repeating.
