Suitable for residential terraces, poolside areas, landscaped gardens, hospitality projects, and commercial outdoor spaces, our collections are developed to adapt naturally to a variety of settings while maintaining a clear and consistent visual identity.

Seville

Blending sculptural refinement with contemporary craftsmanship, Seville combines graceful proportions with an effortlessly light presence. Its dynamic base creates subtle movement beneath a generous tabletop, balancing architectural strength with understated elegance.

Clean silhouettes and sculptural joinery define a dining collection that feels both elegant and inviting. Crafted entirely from teak, each piece celebrates material purity through balanced proportions, thoughtful detailing, and quiet architectural confidence.

Lotus

A study in balance between strength and lightness, Lotus pairs a sculptural teak frame with refined handwoven detailing.

The curved backrest and open structure create an inviting silhouette, while the woven texture introduces warmth, rhythm, and understated elegance.

Offered in both open and closed weave expressions, Lotus transforms its architectural presence through shifts in density and transparency. The open weave introduces porosity and rhythm, lightening the silhouette and allowing the teak frame to breathe within its surroundings, while the closed weave creates a more continuous plane that deepens visual weight and spatial definition. In both interpretations, the dialogue between solid structure and woven surface is deliberate and refined, positioning Lotus as a considered exploration of proportion, restraint, and material precision.

The open weave expression introduces lightness and movement to the Lotus silhouette, allowing air and shadow to pass freely through its sculptural teak frame. Structured yet permeable, the woven surface creates visual rhythm while maintaining supportive comfort, giving the piece a refined transparency that feels architectural, modern, and quietly expressive.

Rounded in form and wrapped in handwoven rope, the Lotus side tables echo the architectural language of the loungers while introducing a sculptural softness.

Depending on the selected rope tone, they can either dissolve seamlessly into the seating composition or stand apart as subtle accents, adding depth, texture, and material dialogue to the space.

In the dining setting, rope weaving is integrated with restraint, framing the teak structure without overpowering it.

The result is a composition that feels modern and refined, where craftsmanship and proportion work together to create a dining experience that is elevated, balanced, and quietly expressive.

The closed weave introduces a denser, more enveloping expression of Lotus, strengthening its architectural presence while maintaining refined proportion. By tightening the rhythm of the rope, the silhouette feels grounded and composed, offering a sense of intimacy and structure that enhances both comfort and visual depth.

Cayman

Finely sanded solid teak defines a dining collection shaped by clarity, proportion, and material expression. The chairs combine structural precision with generous comfort, their subtly curved backs and spacious seats creating a composed silhouette that feels refined without overpowering a space. Every transition between leg, seat, and backrest is carefully resolved, allowing the natural warmth and grain of the teak to articulate the design with quiet confidence.

The dining table features a slatted top crafted for outdoor performance, supported by sculptural legs that curve with controlled elegance beneath the surface. Softly rounded edges and a beautifully engineered base introduce movement and architectural rhythm, balancing strength with fluidity. Together, the collection conveys a design-led vision of contemporary outdoor dining, grounded in craftsmanship and timeless material integrity.

The breadth of each element creates visual weight, while the refined finishing keeps the composition controlled and elegant. Oslo carries a quiet opulence, where material richness, disciplined geometry, and thoughtful detailing come together in a setting that feels commanding, composed, and unmistakably luxurious.ity.
