

how Europe's best international players fare over the seaside course, which can at times be highly exposed to the elements.

Riikka Hakkarainen from Finland who claimed her coveted first Ladies European Tour title last year at Abama Golf and Resort is the defending champion and will be keen to do well in order to receive valuable Solheim Cup points, which are on offer for top ten finishes in all LET rankings tournaments this year up to and including the Wales Ladies Championship of Europe (August 16th -19th).

Now in its sixth year, the Tenerife Ladies Open has become an established event on the LET calendar. The tournament always attracts a strong international field and is the perfect place to open the main leg of events on the 2007 Ladies European Tour, following the season opening Women's World Cup of Golf and the two events in Australia.

This year's Ladies European Tour schedule is extremely busy, with 25 events in 19 different countries. There are eight tournaments in a row beginning with the Tenerife Ladies Open, from where the tour will travel directly to Castellon in Spain for the Spanish Open at Mediterraneo Country Club from May 10th - 13th. Kiwi Lynn Brooky will hope to retain the title that she earned at Panoramica Golf and Country Club in 2006. Brooky has since changed her swing and has been training intensively over the past few months.
