Urban Gardens Are Transforming City Mental Health, Study Finds

A large-scale study published in the journal Environmental Health Perspectives has found that access to community gardens in urban areas significantly reduces anxiety and depression among city residents. Researchers followed 4,000 participants across twelve cities over three years. Those who spent at least two hours per week gardening reported 34% lower stress levels than those with no green space access. "Green spaces in cities are not a luxury — they are a public health necessity," said lead author Dr. Amara Diallo.

The Energy Transition and the Future of Work

As governments accelerate the transition from fossil fuels to renewable energy, economists are warning of significant disruptions to employment. Coal mining regions, in particular, face widespread job losses. However, the renewable sector is expected to create far more positions than it eliminates — but in different locations and requiring different skills. Retraining programmes will be essential if workers are to benefit from the green economy.

ILO. The Future of Work in the Energy Transition. Available at: <https://www.ilo.org>. Accessed: 6 Apr. 2025.

Based on the article, which sentence best predicts what will happen as the energy transition accelerates?

- A. Coal mining jobs are going to increase as global demand for energy rises.
- B. Many traditional energy jobs will be lost, but renewable sectors will create new ones.
- C. Governments are going to stop investing in renewable energy within five years.
- D. Retraining programmes will be cancelled due to lack of government funding.
- E. Renewable energy workers will earn less than fossil fuel workers in all regions.

#00000030

Comentário: A palavra 'biodiversity loss' refere-se à perda de variedade de espécies nos ecossistemas, tema central do texto. A passagem descreve como o desaparecimento de organismos enfraquece cadeias alimentares e a resiliência natural.

Tropical ecosystems such as rainforests and coral reefs are home to more than half of all known species on Earth. When these environments are destroyed, thousands of species disappear permanently — many before science even has the chance to study them. The loss of different organisms weakens entire food chains and reduces the natural resilience of ecosystems to disease and climate extremes. Researchers estimate that the current rate of species extinction is one thousand times higher than natural background rates.

Comentário: O conto usa metáforas do inverno para retratar estados emocionais: o gelo representa insensibilidade emocional, o degelo simboliza reabertura e cura, e a tempestade de neve representa a intensidade da dor. A segunda afirmação é falsa pois o 'silêncio' não representa frieza, mas contenção necessária.

She had built walls of ice around herself — not out of cruelty, but survival. Every winter, they grew a little thicker. Then, one unremarkable Tuesday in March, someone left a cup of tea outside her door without a word. The ice did not melt all at once. It never does. But a crack appeared, thin as a hair, and through it came the first sound in years: her own laughter, surprising her like a bird flying out of a closed room.

— Original short story excerpt: The Thaw, by C. Mensah (2024)

Read the statements about the story and choose True or False for each one:

- 1. The character uses emotional walls as a form of self-protection.
- 2. The "silence" in the story represents coldness and cruelty toward others.
- 3. The cup of tea symbolises a small but significant act of kindness.
- 4. The character's laughter suggests she has completely recovered from all pain.

Book Review: "Borders" shows that fiction can change how we see the world

[...] What makes "Borders" exceptional is not its subject matter — refugee displacement is well-documented — but the extraordinary intimacy with which the author renders the interior lives of her characters. You do not read this novel about a refugee family's journey across three countries. You live it alongside them. When the eldest daughter reaches the final border crossing, the reader's hands tremble alongside hers. This is what the best literature does: it erases the distance between us and those whose lives feel impossibly different from our own. [...]

(N67 | Speaking – negotiating plans)

#0000053

Comentário: A negociação se desenvolve da seguinte forma: Pedro propõe fazer o trabalho na biblioteca na sexta, mas Yuki tem aula. Yuki sugere sábado à tarde; Pedro prefere de manhã porque tem compromisso à tarde. Chegam ao acordo de sábado às 11h — um meio-termo.

Read the conversation between Pedro and Yuki about a group project:

Pedro: "Hey Yuki, should we meet at the library on Friday to work on the project?"

Yuki: "Friday doesn't work — I have a class until 7 PM. What about Saturday?"

Pedro: "Saturday works! When though? I have football practice in the afternoon."

Yuki: "I usually sleep late... How about 11 in the morning? That works for both of us."

Pedro: "11 AM on Saturday. Perfect. See you there!"

Source: Adapted dialogue for language learning.

Which statement best explains how the negotiation developed and concluded?

- A. Pedro and Yuki agreed to meet at the library on Friday evening.
- B. Yuki insisted on meeting in the afternoon and Pedro eventually accepted.
- C. They compromised on Saturday at 11 AM after both had proposed different constraints.
- D. The meeting was cancelled because neither could find a time that worked.
- E. Yuki proposed 11 AM from the beginning and Pedro immediately agreed.

Comentário: As instruções no diálogo indicam: sair da estação de trem, virar à esquerda, caminhar dois quarteirões pela Station Road, virar à direita na Bridge Street, e o mercado coberto ficará à esquerda, em frente ao banco. A alternativa B reproduz fielmente esse trajeto.

Read the dialogue below:

Visitor: "Excuse me, how do I get to the covered market from the train station?"

Local: "Easy! When you exit the station, turn left and walk two blocks along Station Road. Then turn right onto Bridge Street. The covered market will be on your left, directly opposite the bank."

Visitor: "Brilliant, thank you!"

Source: Adapted dialogue for language learning purposes.

Which of the following best summarizes the directions given?

- A. Turn right at the exit, walk one block, turn left, and the market is on the right.
- B. Turn left at the exit, walk two blocks on Station Road, turn right on Bridge Street, market on the left.
- C. Go straight from the exit, turn left twice, and the market is next to the bank.
- D. Walk along Bridge Street, turn left on Station Road, and look for the bank on the right.
- E. Turn left at the exit, walk three blocks, turn left again, and the market is behind the bank.

(N67 | Local actions)

#00000055

Comentário: O texto destaca ações locais tomadas pela associação de moradores: instalação de hortas comunitárias em terrenos abandonados, criação de um banco de sementes gratuito e organização de oficinas mensais de jardinagem orgânica. Essas iniciativas mostram que a soberania alimentar começa na comunidade.

Read the community newsletter excerpt below:

This year, the residents of Jardim Esperança neighbourhood launched three food sovereignty initiatives. First, the community transformed three vacant lots into shared vegetable gardens, producing enough food to supply 40 families each week with fresh produce. Second, a free community seed bank was established, allowing residents to borrow and return seeds throughout the growing season. Third, monthly organic gardening workshops were organised, attracting over 80 participants of all ages. As the community coordinator explained: "Food security starts in your own backyard."

Jardim Esperança Community Bulletin. Available at: <https://jardimesperanca.org.br>. Accessed: 14 Apr. 2025.

Which of the following best describes the local actions mentioned in the newsletter?

- A. Hosting international food security conferences and global farming debates.
- B. Partnering with supermarkets to distribute free food to low-income families.
- C. Installing hydroponic towers on residential rooftops to generate food surplus.
- D. Converting vacant lots to gardens, creating a seed bank, and running gardening workshops.
- E. Sending community leaders to rural areas for sustainable farming exchange programmes.

Comentário: A sequência correta para realizar primeiros socorros em caso de queimadura leve é: primeiro resfriar a área com água fria corrente, depois cobrir com material limpo e não aderente, em seguida procurar orientação médica se necessário, e não aplicar cremes ou pasta de dente. Essa sequência é o protocolo padrão de primeiros socorros.

Read the first aid guide below:

How to Treat a Minor Burn

If a minor burn occurs, follow these steps carefully. First, immediately cool the burn by holding it under cool (not cold) running water for at least ten minutes — never use ice, butter, or toothpaste. Then, cover the burn loosely with a clean, non-stick dressing or cling film to protect the area from infection. Next, take a pain reliever if needed to manage discomfort. Finally, seek medical advice if the burn is larger than the palm of your hand or if blistering is severe.

(N67 | Speaking – ordering food)

#00000057

Comentário: A expressão 'Would you happen to have...' é considerada a mais educada entre as opções, pois usa uma estrutura com modal ('would') combinada com uma construção interrogativa indireta, o que suaviza ao máximo o pedido. É amplamente reconhecida como forma extremamente polida em inglês formal.

Read the restaurant dialogue below:

Waiter: "Good evening! Welcome to Bella Terra. Can I take your order?"

Customer: "Yes, thank you. _____ a vegetarian pasta option tonight? I didn't see one clearly on the menu."

Waiter: "Absolutely! We have a delicious pesto linguine — it's one of our most popular dishes."

Customer: "Wonderful. I'll have that, please."

Source: English in Context – Restaurant Dialogues, adapted for language learning.

Which of the following would be the most polite way for the customer to ask?

- A. Do you have vegetarian pasta?
- B. Would you happen to have a vegetarian pasta option tonight?
- C. Give me the vegetarian pasta if you have one.
- D. I want the vegetarian pasta now.
- E. There should be vegetarian pasta on this menu.
