Ownership notice

Lisn platform materials

The operator trading as lisn connect reserves the intellectual property rights it owns in Lisn's original software, interface artwork, written content, templates and documentation, to the extent those rights are recognised by law.

You may use Lisn and its materials in accordance with the Terms of Use, your authorised access and any applicable licence. Other copying, adaptation, distribution or commercial use of protected platform materials requires permission unless permitted by law.

Your content

You retain the rights you own in journals, responses, recordings, documents, custom tracker content and other material you submit or create within Lisn. Lisn receives only the limited permission described in the Terms of Use to handle that content for the requested service. This notice does not transfer ownership of your content to lisn connect.

Third-party materials and lawful use

Base44 and other third-party providers retain their respective rights in their technology and materials. Applicable third-party and open-source licences continue to apply.

This notice does not claim exclusive ownership of general ideas, methods or standard software functions. It does not restrict lawful exceptions or rights that cannot legally be excluded.
